The concepts of striving, continuing to grow and understanding power are all critical to career development. As the decades of your career roll out, you will discover the arc of your professional and personal life. Students often see themselves as future professors, but your career options may be much broader than that. Julie will inspire you to think more creatively about your career and the many opportunities you will discover. You will also learn strategies to cope with the barriers you may encounter due to gender, class and race. Embracing dynamic change is the key to success.
